“A very good morning ma'am

A big gratitude from the core of my heart for all that the school has done ...the meticulously crafted curricula....the personal touch of the teachers....

Everything under your able guidance.

Special thanks to Harpreet Sir for patiently catering to the anxiety of all parents

Thank you dear parent!

This bright morning we were pleasantly surprised! An emotional note from a parent, made all the difference. It will surely encourage all the Staff, which has worked as a Team, for the benefit of the learners.

Principal

For anyone who thinks schools don't care.
SCHOOLS CARE!!

Did the school ever post the spoiled tiffin box picture on whatsapp or on FB, which was kept in the child's bag unattended?

Did the school ever mention about the unwell child, who was driven back to his or her house along with a caring school staff, after making numerous calls?

Did the school ever put an email to the parents stating that the vacation period of the teachers has been reduced as they have to take extra training to update themselves with the curriculum?

Did a teacher ever share a selfi with a student stating that "shared my lunch with my student as his mother was unwell and was not able to cook for him" ...feeling joyful?

Did any teacher ever share a screenshot of her medical report which says she has High BP and Spondylitis due to lack of sleep?

Did the school ever share a big post on the child who had just lost one of his parents, and how the Principal and the teachers took special care of him on emotional grounds?

Did the school "nanny" ever sit in the park with other parents and gossip that how a child soiled her dress by vomiting on her and she was wearing that stained/wet dress for the whole day?

There are uncountable incidences like these happening in the school every day and every minute but the school staff and the teachers don't share these incidents on social media.

Schools care and share whatever is a pride to students and their parents.

So, before you convey your grudge in an inappropriate way on social media about the school and its staff, please take a few precious moments of yours and rethink.

Please note that the school is also working for the students and managing so many kids efficiently and effectively day in and day out with utmost love, care and devotion. The teachers teach them, care for them, love them, scold them, cry with them, laugh with them and also sometimes learn from them.

Hence, please respect the school, and let your child learn how to respect.

If as a parent you showcase negativity in front of your child about the school, remember next time it could be you...because by this time he or she may learn this art of being disrespectful to one who CARES. So contribute in giving a respectful face to education.

ITS TIME TO DEMAND RAISE, not a raise in remunerations but a raise in RESPECT, DIGNITY AND VALUE.
